

World History

France Simulation Sheet

Name:
Section:

Directions: Use the following information to help you fill out your stances on the different issues in question being discussed at the treaty of Versailles. Try to match your decisions as close as possible to the information listed below.

France

As George Clemenceau, the President of France, you have been alive long enough to see France be invaded twice by the Germans. The first time was the Franco-Prussian war of the 1870s, and then in this current conflict you have seen almost 6.2 million Frenchmen either killed or wounded (close to 25% of your country's male population) over the four years of the "Great War". You have been nicknamed 'the tiger' for your fiery and unwavering stance.

Your task is simple, you are to try and weaken the Germans as much as possible and in any way possible. You are trying to prevent the Germans from ever being strong enough to invade your country again. Your nation has suffered four years of slaughter as much of the war was fought on your soil. Along with the costs of the war, you must also re-build large portions of Eastern France that have been torn about by the terrors of World War I. Your primary goal should be vengeance, and damaging Germany's ability to make war ever again.

